

SOP for PMN-PT Substrate

Dasika Shishir

Intended Design

- PMN-PT (110) cut is capable of producing anisotropic inplane strain.
- Anisotropic inplane strain is essential for magnetostrictive domain rotation in thin films.
- The bottom and top electrodes as nickel microstructures will be deposited via sputtering, and patterned via e-be

